Libertarian Candidate for U.S. Senate draws a crowd for cannabis

Ogden, UT, January 24, 2018: Craig Bowden, a Libertarian candidate seeking office for the U.S. Senate from North Ogden, held an event in conjunction with petitioners from the Utah Patient Coalition to help gather signatures to get medical cannabis on the 2018 ballot in Ogden at the Iron Horse bar.

While assisting in collecting signatures, Craig took a moment to address the petitioners and individuals who had gathered. He said, "When the Utah legislature failed to pass a medicinal cannabis bill last year sponsored by Senator Madsen, I was initially crushed. However, that feeling of hope lost became a drive to keep fighting. The legislature may not have listened to the 75% of voters who support this, so we have taken it to the streets to put it on the ballot."

"I know with the volunteers I have seen we will get this on the ballot, and then it will fall on that 75% to say that patients deserve to have the agency on the medical services that will best help their lives. No parent deserves the threat of child services taking their kid for trying to get them better, and no one deserves to go to jail for healing."

Craig Bowden has also stated that he would sponsor legislation to de-schedule cannabis so that more research could be conducted to find more value in its use for other patients in the United States.
